“Management as a Liberal Art”

About Joe Maciariello

Joseph Maciariello is the Horton Professor of Management at the Peter F. Drucker and Masatoshi Ito Graduate School of Management and Research and Academic Director of The Drucker Institute of Claremont Graduate University. Professor Maciariello has designed fourteen Drucker on Management MBA and EMBA modules that are being used in both China and India. He serves on two boards of non-profit organizations.

Dr. Maciariello’s areas of expertise include Drucker on management, management control systems, and management as a liberal art. His current research focuses on management as a liberal art, managing social sector institutions and developing people from success to significance.

Dr. Maciariello has collaborated with Peter Drucker on many publications, and recently revised and updated Management: Revised Edition. He also collaborated with Peter Drucker to publish The Daily Drucker and The Effective Executive in Action, three Internet executive development modules entitled Leading Change and two articles on management in the social sector. In addition, he has written three articles providing a systematic, integrated description of some of the major works of Peter Drucker: “Peter F. Drucker on a Functioning Society” (Leader to Leader, Summer 2005), “Mastering Peter Drucker’s The Effective Executive” (Leader to Leader, Summer 2006) and a book chapter, “Peter F. Drucker on Executive Leadership and Effectiveness” (Chapter 1, Leader of the Future 2). He teaches the course “Drucker on Management” for MBA and Executive MBA students and has along with professor Yamawaki developed the Drucker Difference Course. He co-edited The Drucker Difference book with Professors Craig Pearce and Hideki Yamawaki.

Dr. Maciariello received his Ph.D. from New York University.
